- (D) Such statements, with appropriate reductions to protect the privacy or security of the witness, shall be made publicly available in electronic form not later than one day after the witness appears.

RUSSELL R. WHEELER

Russell R. Wheeler is a Visiting Fellow in the Brookings Institution's Governance Studies Program and president of the Governance Institute, a small think tank with a special interest in interbranch relations,

From 1991 to 2005, he was the deputy director of the Federal Judicial Center, the federal courts' research and continuing education agency. In that position, and later at Brookings, he was the equivalent of the staff director for The Judicial Conduct and Disability Act Study Committee, appointed by Chief Justice Rehnquist and known informally, after its chair, as the "Breyer Committee." He joined the Center in 1977, having served previously at the National Center for State Courts and the United States Supreme Court.

His research and publications deal principally with United States courts, in particular judicial selection, judicial ethics and non-case related behavior, court-media relations, and the immigration courts of the U.S. Department of Justice.

He is an adjunct professor at American University's Washington College of Law and is a Fellow and former advisory board member of the University of Denver's Institute for the Advancement of the American Legal System. He is in his second term as a Public Member of the Administrative Conference of the United States. He served previously, among other positions, as the United States representative to the Board of the Justice Studies Center of the Americas, based in Santiago Chile and created by the Organization of American States to help counties in Central and South America, and the Caribbean, adopt and adapt adversary civil and criminal judicial procedures.

He is a graduate of the University of Chicago (Ph.D., 1970, political science) and Augustana College (Ill.) (1965).
